POINTS OF INTEREST

The Bridgewater Canal, or 'Dukes Cut' as it was known, was opened in 1761 to transport coal from the Duke of Bridgewater's mines at Worsley to Manchester. It is claimed to be the first canal in Britain because it was the first waterway to be built that didn't follow an existing river or stream. Visit www.bridgewatercanal.co.uk

Bedford Moss contains a 92 hectare Site of Special Scientific Interest. The moss forms part of an E.U. Special Area of Conservation (Manchester Mosses.) Bedford Moss is separated from Chat Moss by the railway.

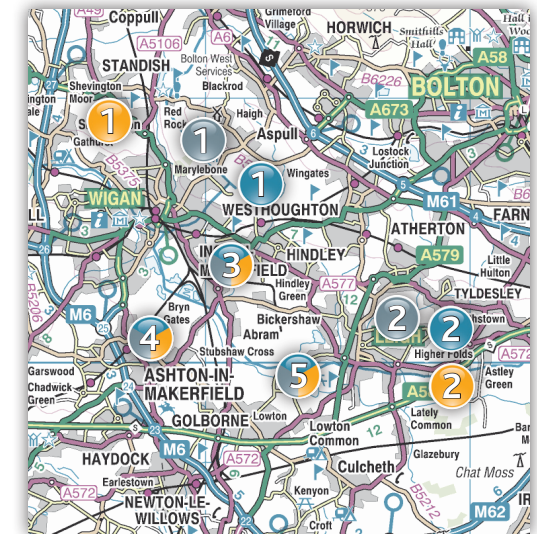

The fields here contain Astley Raceway, run by Leigh Moto Cross.

Astley Green Colliery Museum has a 3300hp winding engine and contains the last surviving headgear and engine house in Lancashire. Set in fifteen acres of land bordering the Moss, the museum contains many steam locomotives. Visit www.agcm.org.uk for more information.
